

Jean Ferguson Oswald is a recent addition to the Driver Instructional Services Division as a Curriculum Specialist. She comes to the position after numerous years in Adult Education as teacher, administrator, and advisor. Having taught at ITT Technical College and several community colleges in Virginia and Tennessee, she served most recently as an academic advisor to students receiving Master of Arts in Teaching and Masters of Science in Education from Walden University, helping them to navigate both the education and regulatory issues facing prospective teachers.

She completed her BA in English Literature from Loyola College and her Masters of Education in Secondary Education and English from Converse College. In addition to those degrees, she also completed the necessary coursework to become certified to teach children with learning disabilities and with emotional disabilities. She is currently obtaining her Doctorate of Education in Higher Education and Adult Learning.

She looks forward to working with driving instructors, schools, and students as they work together to make Maryland roads safe for everyone.

For questions or assistance with the curricula or teaching matters, please email her at joswald@mdot.state.md.us or phone at 410-787-7863.